With Steve Jobs' resignation as CEO of Apple, some are asking questions about the future of the tech industry. A cruel disease forcing the 56-year-old Jobs to be as much as anyone who transforms the world through technology, releases what he does better than anybody. Jobs have fought pancreatic cancer and other health problems since at least 2004, and have already taken three leaves of absence. Nobody in the tech world is surprised by his departure, but everyone is sad. It is a sad moment for the Silicon Valley business world, which is losing its talents. It is a sad moment for all customers who were thrilled by the products it gave to the world. And it is a sad moment for Steve Jobs and his family. He was one of the most influential leaders in the information age, continuously pushing engineers to design-friendly products. All are familiar with his vision of elegant design and simplified features. You can pick up anyone in his product and be impressed by his design. Each has a look and feel that consumer is happy. The business world wonders if there is another vision for on the Apple product line. Tim Cook officially began as interim CEO of Apple. Every one of Apple hopes Cook will continue the vision of Job. However, the price of Apple stock fell the day after Job resigned. No one doubts that the stock will go up again soon with the release of the next iPhone or iPad product. All PCs, tablets, smart phones and cameras will continue to apply the lessons Steve Job put in the leader-series technology.
